- Q Between the boardwalk and the house? A. Between Mr. Stevens and the boardwalk, and then the boardwalk was between me and the house. He was nearer the water, in other words, and I was between him and the boardwalk. You see on this side of the boardwalk, unless you are just going back and forth, you could not walk.
- Q You distinctly remember that it was he? A. Yes, oh, yes.
- Q What is there about his appearance? A. Nothing any more than I know the man, particularly seeing him right there in front of his own house impressed it on me.
- Q There is no doubt in your mind? A. That it was Henry, no.
- Q Now, when you looked at your watch where were you?
- A Right in front of his--almost in front of his house here, a little before that, because that was what was bringing me off of the sand, because it was down on the sand that I looked to see what they were doing, and then looked at my watch and concluded it was late enough and walked back to the house.
- Q What is there that serves to recall to your mind that it was September 14, 1922? A. Because that was the night, the odd night during the week that I came down. I went home the next day, Friday. Thursday was the 14th and I
